

Wily Rodents.

A gentleman in Pennsylvania kept a number of dogs and was in the habit of feeding them in a long trough in the stable. One day he happened to peer through a hole in the door as the dogs were feeding and was astonished to see a number of rats in the trough, fearlessly partaking of the food with the dogs. The rodents were at once doomed to destruction, so the next day the trough was placed in such a position that a gun pointed through the hole would rake it from end to end. At the usual hour the food was placed, the dogs being kept out. The rats, however, did not make their appearance; the heads of several sagacious old ones were seen peering out from their holes, and there was a great amount of squealing, but the rats evidently had their suspicions and would not leave their retreats. Having waited for half an hour, the dogs were let in, and in a few minutes dogs and rats were feeding peacefully together. The little creatures seemed to be fully aware that they were safe only when the dogs were present.—Golden Days.

Wouldn't Mix.

Bridget's mistress was reproving her sharply for pouring hard water into a boiler of soft water to be used for washing.

"Didn't I tell you never to do such a thing?" her mistress asked.

"Yes, mum, sure," returned Bridget, "but I guess it won't matter. Ole soon dip the hard water out. It is on top, ye know."—Pharmaceutical Era.

Salt for Clearing Water.

The formation of mud shoals at the mouths of rivers is due to the admixture of salt water with fresh water holding fine particles of mud in solution. The pure water is so affected by the contact that it throws down the mud which it might otherwise have held in suspension for many days. The action of salt in thus clearing water was announced to the British geological society not long since as a new discovery; but the American Journal of Science and Arts asserts that the clearing of water by salt as well as by alum, has been a popular recipe for ages. It also mentions an American publication in which the action at the mouths of rivers is pointedly referred to.

Don't Smoke Your Meat.

In broiling meat over coals never allow them to smoke the least. After the coals have burned down somewhat throw on a handful of salt to deaden the blue flame that arises. If the dripping from your meat takes fire, remove from the stove to cool for a few moments. Don't try to blow it out, as there is danger of burning the face.

PENN Mutual Life Insurance Company, OF PHILADELPHIA.

The Spectator, of New York (a weekly insurance review), says:

For forty years the Penn Mutual Life has been, without any loud blaring of trumpets, accumulating business, until to-day it stands among the eight life insurance companies of this country having over $100,000,000 of assurance in force. This business, too, has been gathered by clear work and by careful selection. The present officers of the company constitute a board of experts in the whole range of detail pertaining to a life assurance company, which is the peer of any corps of officers in the country.

Before insuring your life examine the plans of the "Penn." If you want Incontestable Policies.
